

Incident Command System 300

Description – The course will review the necessary steps for executive emergency planning and decision-making for crisis situations such as: basic disaster operations, and events/incidents-driven situations. This is an excellent opportunity for local officials to acquire information about the National Response Plan. It is a way of understanding local roles in how the NIMS can assist in the implementation of the MEMA. We must note that in order to receive federal reimbursement of money spent following a declared state of emergency, the
